

[Bio Example #1]

BIO (long)

“If you want to go fast, go alone. If you want to go far, go together.”

Raelynn O’Leary loves collaborating with others to achieve a common goal. She also relishes a good challenge, whether it’s designing a web-based decision-support tool to help disadvantaged women make better-informed decisions about sterilization, developing a cyber-enhanced learning tool to help field researchers more accurately identify macroinvertebrates, or making nutrition labels easier for kids to understand.

As a user researcher, interaction designer, and visual designer with a special interest in data visualization, Raelynn is passionate about creating meaningful connections between people and the products and services with which they interact. With well over a decade of experience in the information design field, she has earned a reputation as a creative, balanced, and reliable professional who’s able to get up to speed on new topics or domains quickly and then translate user needs into practicable, actionable design solutions.

While earning her Master’s in Design from Carnegie Mellon University (CMU), Raelynn learned about design research, and how truly understanding people’s needs, patterns, and behaviors can and should shape a company’s products, systems, and services. Today, much of the work she does through Dezudio emphasizes effective communication—explaining and providing complex information in ways that are easy to understand—and using research and design methodologies to approach complex challenges. Throughout her career she has done simplification work for large corporations, helping them make their communications clear and transparent. She has also designed web and mobile applications and websites for communications, media, healthcare, biological sciences and industrial organizations. In short, she helps clients understand what’s working well and what’s not in their existing tools and products, and then how to turn that valuable information into tangible, workable solutions.

Raelynn is passionate about equality and equal access to information, and is always looking for ways to promote the advancement of girls and young women. She also remains actively involved at CMU as an adjunct faculty member, thesis reviewer, and student mentor, teaching and mentoring future designers. Outside of the office, she enjoys painting, gardening, and doing creative projects with her husband and two children.

BIO (short)

With well over a decade as a user researcher, interaction designer, and visual designer with a special interest in data visualization, Raelynn O’Leary is passionate about creating meaningful connections between people and the products and services with which they interact.

Raelynn earned a Master’s in Design from Carnegie Mellon University (CMU) in Pittsburgh, where she learned about design research and how truly understanding people’s needs, patterns, and behaviors can and should shape a company’s products, systems, and services. Today, much of the work she does through Dezudio emphasizes effective communication—explaining and providing complex information in ways that are easy to understand—and using forward-thinking research and design methodologies to approach complex challenges. In short, she loves collaborating with clients to help them understand what’s working well and what’s not in their existing tools and products, and then how to turn that valuable information into tangible, workable solutions.

[Bio Example #2]

Stephanie Thomas Kramer is a skilled attorney and advisor, with over 15 years' experience in the areas of finance and corporate law, elder law, estate planning, and probate and trust administration.

As owner, attorney, and corporate advisor of The Elder Law Offices of Olimpi & Kramer in Beaver, Pa., Kramer recommends, drafts, and implements estate, business and financial plans, in addition to assisting larger firms with due diligence matters related to large securities transactions. She also serves as attorney, advisor and/or Board Member to a variety of private for-profit and non-profit client businesses, organizations, and municipalities.

Previously Kramer has worked as an attorney for Rothman Gordon (Pittsburgh); Costa Law Offices (Monaca, Pa.); Eckert, Seamans, Cherin & Mellott (Pittsburgh); and Borger & Horsley (Warren, Pa.) She also served as Relationship Manager and Mid-Atlantic Region Team Leader of Corporate Trust Employee Engagement Committee for BNY-Mellon (Pittsburgh), and as Estate Administrator and Trust Officer for Huntington National Bank (New Castle, Pa.).

She is currently a Board Member of Adoption Connection; a member of and solicitor for the Beaver County Chamber of Commerce; solicitor of Darlington Borough; and a volunteer for Lifesteps, Inc. She is also a member of the Beaver County Bar Association and the Allegheny County Bar Association. In 2002, she was named Public Interest Advocate, by the Miller Center for Public Interest Advocacy.

Kramer earned a bachelor's degree in History and Economics from the University of Dayton in 1999; an M.B.A. from Geneva College in 2008; and a Juris Doctor from Dickinson School of Law, Pennsylvania State University in 2002. University of Dayton, Bachelor of Arts, History and Economics (1999).

[Bio Example #3]

Corey Olszanski is a talented, personable realtor, dedicated to helping people realize the home of their dreams.

After earning a degree in Graphic Design from Cuyahoga Community College in (1997) and another in Interior Design from Art Institute of Pittsburgh (2005), Corey moved from Cleveland Heights, Ohio, to Beaver County in 2004 and fell in love with western PA. Before becoming a licensed realtor in 2011, she worked in custom upholstery and window treatment sales and design consulting, and as a visual merchandiser and assistant buyer for a Pittsburgh-area furniture retailer. Today, in addition to serving the clients of Bovard Anderson, Corey also serves as a design consultant for Richwell Custom Homes.

Corey is a member of the National Association of Realtors, Pennsylvania Association of Realtors, and the Beaver County Association of Realtors, and she prides herself in unmatched client service. An honest and professional realtor, she specializes in new construction and home staging, and strives to make the process as fun and enjoyable as possible for her clients.

In her free time, Corey enjoys spending time with her husband, Scott, relaxing at their home in Brighton Township or soaking up the sun out on their boat in Lake Erie.